EXPERIENTIAL LEARNING

At our school, we believe that learning by doing is the cornerstone of education. Our Biology Lab recently came alive with the Pollen Germination Experiment, where students explored the concept of viable vs. non-viable pollen grains through hands-on discovery.

What They Did:

Prepared a pollen germination medium with precision.

Sprinkled mature pollen grains and observed pollen tube formation under the microscope.

Drew conclusions about pollen viability based on real-time observations.

Why It Matters:

This engaging activity isn't just about science—it's about fostering critical thinking, honing observation skills, and making abstract concepts tangible.

At our school, experiential learning is woven into the fabric of our teaching methodology, ensuring that students don't just memorize facts but truly understand and apply them.
