GROUP DISCUSSION

Exploring Generational Bridges: A Thoughtful Session in Grade XI!

DPS 84 ensures the overall development of our students, where regular exposure is given to students in form of debate, discussions etc. In tune with this philosophy a vibrant discussion was conducted in our Grade XI where students delved into the profound lessons of "Father to Son." The classroom transformed into a melting pot of emotions and insights during a riveting group discussion that touched upon the complexities of parent-child communication. With hearts full of candor, students jotted down their thoughts on chits, revealing the concerns and challenges they often face when communicating with their parents. From misunderstandings to the struggle of being truly heard, the myriad emotions flowed onto those small pieces of paper. The beauty of the session lay in the collective brainstorming of solutions. Students, as budding problem-solvers, proposed ways to bridge the generational communication gap. Ideas ranged from setting aside dedicated 'family time' to fostering an environment of active listening, where both parents and children could truly understand each other. Kudos to our students for their openness and sincerity! Let's continue building bridges and fostering understanding in our journey of growth and learning!
